

This speech of Judah's had such an effect upon Joseph, that he could no longer restrain the tender emotions of his soul, but was obliged to make himself known to them. But this we reserve for the next chapter.

CHAP. XV.

Joseph makes himself known to his Brethren, and other Circumstances.

JOSEPH was too strongly affected to make any reply to what Judah had advanced. CHAP. All his affections were in motion; his heart melted

D 2